

OFFICERS SEARCH ARRIVING LINERS

Close Watch for Crippen
Maintained By New York
Detectives.

today insisted that the couple now sought were wed, but was forced to admit that her daughter, when asked, had never been able to produce a marriage certificate.

Prof. Pepper today gave special attention to the hair dug out of the basement, as well as of the hairpins and other articles recovered by the police. An effort to identify the body by the teeth also was begun today.

Dr. Crippen's wife disappeared about February 2, Crippen, with Miss Leneve, who were some of Mrs. Crippen's friends and jewels, appeared at several entertainments shortly thereafter, telling all inquirers that Mrs. Crippen had gone to Los Angeles, Cal., where Dr. Crippen's parents reside, to look after some of his business interests.

Then, a few weeks after Mrs. Crippen "went to California," Dr. Crippen inserted in theatrical papers advertisements of the death of Mrs. Crippen in California.

To Mrs. Crippen's half-sister, Mrs. Louise H. Mills, of Brooklyn, Dr. Crippen wrote of the death of his wife "in California." The letter is a clever piece of criminal art.

Story of the Crime.

Crippen told his sister-in-law, in this letter, how one of his wealthy relatives in California lay dying; how it became necessary to have some one look after his interests in the estate; how Mrs. Crippen agreed to make the journey to Los Angeles, how she rushed through to California without stopping to see her relatives; how she was taken ill with pleuro-pneumonia and had died. Crippen said the body was being sent back to him in London.

This letter was written as the body of his wife was being eaten with quicklime in the basement of the house in which he was writing.

A short time after the "death" of Mrs. Crippen, Crippen "married" Miss Leneve, and introduced her as his wife. Even when the police suspected him, Crippen was unperturbed. He admitted to the police that his story of his wife's death was a fabrication. "She left me in anger," he told them, "and I invented the death story to keep the neighbors from talking."

The police declare that even if they capture Crippen, they will have some difficulty in convicting him. It has been thus far impossible legally to identify the body.

UNITED STATES AIDS IN CRIPPEN HUNT

NEW YORK, July 15.—The United States authorities today took a hand in the world-wide hunt for Dr. Harvey Crippen, the American wanted in London in connection with the murder of his wife, and for Ethel Clare Leneve, his stenographer, with whom he fled just before the discovery of Mrs. Crippen's body, buried in the basement of their London home.

Commissioner of Immigration Williams today notified all of his men to watch all incoming steamers. In the hunt, a wireless network is being woven about the globe.

The wireless search was started after Central office detectives here had searched the steamship Queenstown. The police felt certain they would find Dr. Crippen and the stenographer on the liner, but were baffled.

They boarded the Quarantine and made a vain hunt for the couple while she was coming up the bay. This hunt was repeated after she had docked, and the detectives were aided by Mrs. Robert H. Mills, a sister of Mrs. Crippen; Mrs. Fred Ginnett, a personal friend of the slain woman; and James Mahany, who knows the physician.

Messages were sent out from New York and London to all liners at sea which had left ports in England after July 9, when the physician disappeared. This was four days before the body of his wife was found. Liners leaving from French ports were also communicated with.

FRENCH POLICE TRY TO FIND CRIPPEN

PARIS, July 15.—Under the direct order of the minister of justice, M. Barthou, every police official in France today took up the hunt for Dr. H. H. Crippen, the American wanted in London in connection with the murder of his wife, Belle Elmore.

The search for the American and his companion, Ethel Clare Leneve, is today paramount in French police work. While considerable attention is being given to the Riviera, in which the Italian police are co-operating beyond the border, and Prefect Letenne has the crack detectives of Paris ranging the city, the main interest in the hunt for the moment centers about Boulogne-sur-Mer.

It was near there that Ethel Leneve was educated in a convent, acquiring the knowledge of French that enabled her to pass as a girl.

Though the police build no hopes on finding the missing couple near Boulogne they do believe, according to statements made today, that there is a large possibility of tracing them through an investigation in that vicinity.
